It Was Never Seojinia

a book with only ONE picture, by Masoom Haider

P R O L O G U E

Cho Seo-jin, a 16 year old girl, was going to go on a plane on Wizz Air, from her home city, Busan, to a mystery flight. Nothing else was known, except that it was a one-way flight. This was how a rapper described it: “Once you go, say bye to your family. Can’t go back no more.” She boarded the flight. Little did she know she was entering North Korea. It was only an hour to fly from her home to the country. Now, at the time, she didn’t know, but she was about to kill thousands. Rumors say when a plane lands in North Korea, they burn it after and stage a plane crash. And over the years, only thirty five people were fooled. Eighteen died in the country, and the rest defected and are living the life of their dreams.

It was going to be a sad trip.

CHAPTER 1

Over the intercom, a man said, “The flight is now one-way, and welcome to Pyongyang, North Korea. Enjoy your permanent stay.” When Seo-jin found this out, she tried to find a way out. She dug a tunnel into China, but the police caught her. She tried to disguise herself to get out. But she heard gunshots. And a voice speaking, “GET TO WORK! YOUR FIRST DAY STARTS NOW!” As the words faded out and echoed, Seo-jin realized she had to stop people from defecting. Even herself. But of course, just because you prevent defecting doesn’t mean you can’t defect yourself in the future. That’s what Seo-jin had planned. By day, she had prevented people from leaving. By night, she was an ordinary civilian who wrote her days in a diary. Either way, she hated the country, and decided to gain her independence once and for all. So she bought a plain flag, made it all her own with paint, and raised it. Seo-jin said, “From this day forth, this land will officially be known as Seojinia!” and made a state named “Jeung-jwa”, from the Korean words for “acne” and “hatred”. Then, she gave people a defecting route to her country, quit her job, and decided to earn money from selling her kidney for ₩3,500,000. Meanwhile, her new house became where the president of her country lived, just in case there would be a second president, and just 7 hours after she created her country, she had annexed her neighbor, Yun-seo’s, house formally, as the city of “Seola”. Of course, she was sued by the city of Seoul for “similar names”, but she won the lawsuit and ₩2.5 million. She changed Seola’s name to Yunia anyway. Her city was featured in North Korean news, and it got so “crazy”, as Seo-jin described it in her diary, that Peek Freans created a special cookie for her country called “The Seojinian Taste”. Anyways, she used her won to annex in one more state called “Alax’i Nota Tonix Ala”, which was a phrase in her conlang (which was the official language of Seojinia) that meant “God’s note has tones for Him." It was a purely nonsensical sentence, but hey, you can name a state of your country anything! Besides, it was her own country and she was president. Here's a listed timeline of events:

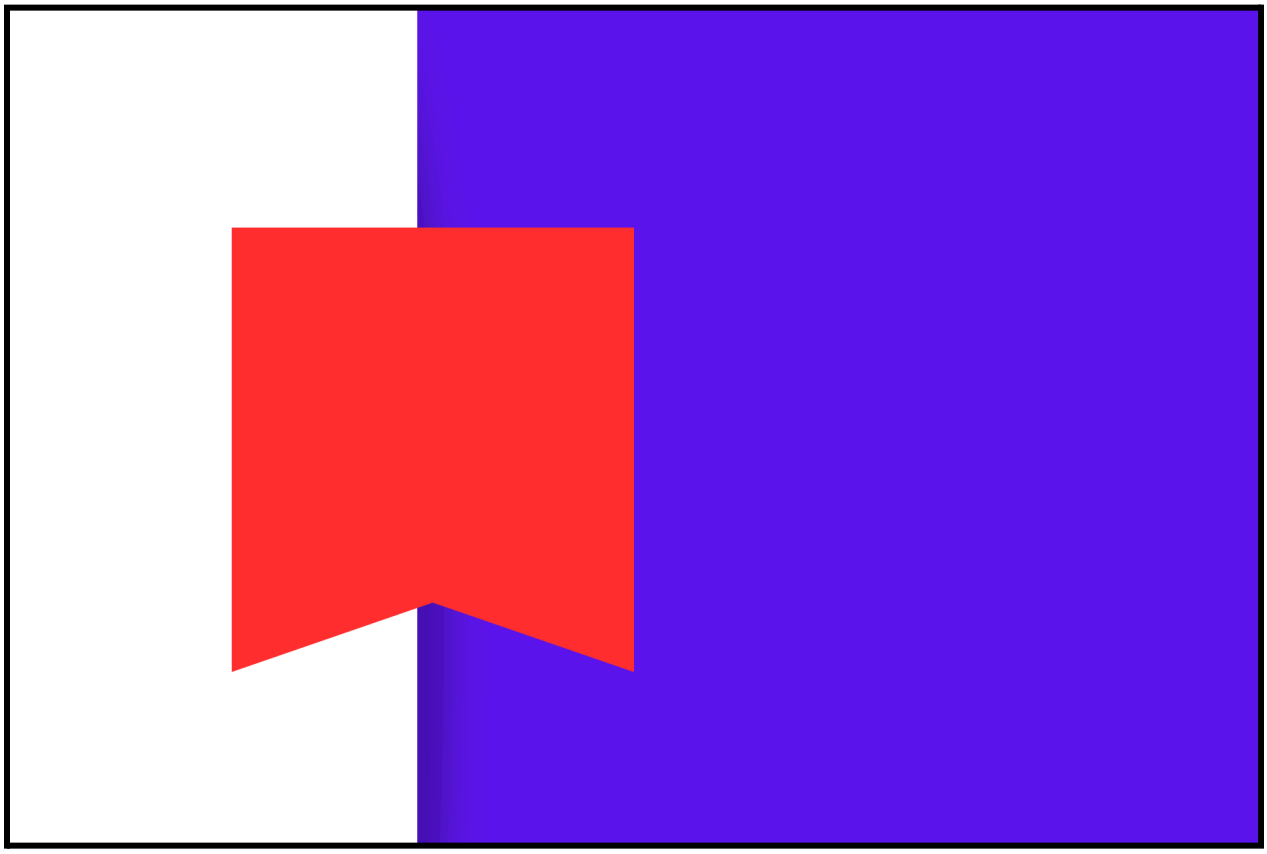
- 3 days after: Seola is created.
- 4 days 20 hours after: North Korea sues Seo-jin.
- 4 days 21 hours after: President Seo-jin wins the lawsuit. Seola's name was changed to Yunia.
- 6 days after: Seojinia gets a new official religion that involves worshipping President Seo-jin, and her grave if she dies. She sells her kidney.
- 10 days after: Seo-jin sells her other kidney, makes two artificial kidneys, and gets surgery to put them in her body.
- 2 weeks after: Seo-jin abuses her power as president, then starts a war.

And speaking of starting a war...

CHAPTER 2

What started out as one bullet became a full-on war. And it was 100% Cho Seo-jin's fault. After abusing her power as president, she decided to break a law one, in any way, shape, or form, could DIE from. She made a real, working gun, pointed it at Kim Jong-un himself, located his brain and fired. Kim Jong-un wasn't that fast. All he did was rule a country like it was nothing. So he was shot, with no time to dodge at all. But there was one small frame missing in the video of her life. And it was none other than the fact that Jong-un was alive. But she didn't care, and she turned North Korea into Seojinian property. But there was one micronation whose president witnessed all this. It was located in South Korea, but was none other than the one, the only...

KINGDOM



OF AETHUS.

That's right, folks, a MICRONATION in the middle of SOUTH KOREA spied on Seojinia, and there was a war about to go on. It was all because the citizens had to worship their president. CHO SEO-JIN herself wanted to be treated like a god - literally. So Seo-jin changed Seojinia's official religion to Christianity. But Aethus' president, Horacio de la Fontaine IV, was genuinely mad. He demanded the war, and just like that, it started. Seojinian kids were dying, Aethus' president dodged over 3,400 shots and resources like food got so incredibly low, Cho Seo-jin was almost KILLED. All of these happened in just ten days, only because she took a shot to the brain of the evilest person of all time. So Seo-jin decided to grab her gun and shoot Horacio IV in the arm. He spent time in the hospital. Meanwhile, she decided to buy 99% of Aethus' land when nobody, and I really mean NOBODY, not even herself, was looking. Now, Aethus was no longer Horacio's house. It was now a ROCK which she threw into the Atlantic Ocean. Aethus was gone, and Horacio de la Fontaine IV was next. Seo-jin changed practically everything about her micronation-turned-country. She made the main religion Satanism, forced people to learn her conlang, and became the Generation Beta version of Hitler. She was so strict, she started Gulag camps everywhere, burned Horacio IV to ashes (what Seo-jin didn’t know was that Horacio de la Fontaine V was now the new president and would revive Aethus (keep in mind Aethus is the micronation Seojinia is at war with)), and even killed a kid on purpose just for existing. But her evil behavior led to a living hell, not just for her citizens, but for the world. And then all world leaders of recognized countries met in a bathroom in Seojinia, and had a fight. It started with Donald Trump stabbing Mark Carney in the butt with a fork, which caused Mark to beat the living hell out of Friedrich Merz, who ended up running out of Seojinia and into Aethus, quitting ruling Germany to be Horacio de la Fontaine V’s roommate, and the micronation’s vice president. Exactly 1.7 seconds after Friedrich stepped out, Carney’s head was cut off. Anthony Albanese was shot and flushed down a toilet because he wasn’t from Albania. Bajram Begaj WAS from Albania, but falsely accused of being Australian. He was hanged upside-down (meaning he hanged from the feet and not the head) and died after the rope was cut off. Vjosa Osmani punched Cho Seo-jin in the chin, causing her to lose a tooth. Since she was from Kosovo, Aleksandar Vučić, who ruled Serbia, stabbed her while she wasn't looking. Salman bin Abdulaziz, king of Saudi Arabia, was mistaken by Cho Seo-jin for a terrorist, and was lit on fire. Eventually, it went on for a few more hours, and new world leaders were elected. Seo-jin then proceeded to conquer South Korea and kill 35,000 people.

CHAPTER 3

Everything was good for Seo-jin. She took over North Korea, she took over Aethus, she took over South Korea, and now she had tons of friends, all of which were evil. She forced Seojinian kids to MARRY, babies to SMOKE and DRINK and even caused the death of 80 world leaders in a single bathroom, now bloody, from the urinals to the toilet bowls. Now, some people would say, “Meh, she’s bad enough,” but to herself and every good person, she was pretty much the embodiment of the Devil. She even forced a baby’s father to download the reportedly cursed .epub file Seojinian citizens had to download, and the next day, he went missing, and - spoiler alert - was found dead. It took a long time to figure out why Seo-jin was so evil she indirectly killed Mark Carney, but eventually, police officer Jordan Andersen found sticky notes written by Seo-jin after the war between Seojinia and Aethus. It said stuff about killing some world leaders because she wanted to see Satan, who she said was “the true God”. This was no longer some funny government business. This was a serious investigation. Jordan climbed a sewer’s ladder down and found the body of Anthony Albanese. Then he connected the dots, concluding that in Seo-jin’s fight, Anthony was shot and flushed down a toilet, and his lifeless rotting corpse went into a manhole. And he was correct. Jordan ripped paper from his notebook and wrote “Case Closed”, then climbed back up with Anthony’s corpse, which was cleaned for his funeral. Seo-jin attended, but instead of crying, she laughed, smiled, farted to hide coughs, coughed to hide farts, danced, and did so many stupid things that Jordan had to come to the funeral and arrest Seo-jin. She was put in a prison where they stretch inmates’ fingers most marvellously until they crack. They do this once a day, every single day, and no non-inmate in the prison has broken the 184-year streak that went on since the prison started. Have you ever wondered what happened after that? If so, here we go. It's the aftermath...

CHAPTER 4

After Seo-jin was arrested, Jordan decided to reveal his identity live on the news, saying he was none other than the world-famous Horacio de la Fontaine V, and as ruler of Aethus, his micronation was promoted to country after being part of the United Nations. Aethus took over Seojinia and became an inspiration for people around the world who wanted to start micronations. And as for Seo-jin? She was shot and flushed down a toilet, going into the same manhole Anthony Albanese did. Oh, would you believe it? A coincidence so crazy even Horacio V himself ran around in circles! Here is the aftermath of the people who survived:

- The 116 alive world leaders except for Friedrich Merz were happy, especially Donald Trump, who cut Cho Seo-jin's yearbook photo into 14 pieces, blended it, and forced one of Seo-jin's SUPER evil friends to drink it. (The evil friend died.)

- Horacio de la Fontaine V's YouTube channel gained 26 million subscribers.
- Friedrich Merz decided to make an artificial island that would be owned by Aethus from January 1 to June 30. And he contacted Germany's new chancellor and asked him to make the island owned by Germany from July 1 to December 31. The cycle would repeat every year.

Seo-jin got the death she deserved, and it was all because of one president and his super-convincing disguise.

One teenage girl. Thousands of deaths.

A 16-year-old is tricked into a flight to North Korea, and creates a micronation. Pretty harmless, right? She annexes a few cities, sells her two kidneys to start fresh, and wins a lawsuit against Seoul. But there's something even worse in store. She makes strict rules for her micronation, and kills its civilians – especially minors – and even another micronation's owner! This leads to a bathroom fight in her micronation, killing lots of world leaders.

One day, a police officer investigates the gruesome crime scene, discovering the bodies of the leaders who died. A funeral is held, and the girl's behavior is straight up disrespectful. Who will emerge victorious in this epic book? Find out in It Was Never Seojinia!